

Perspectives On Human Development, Family, And Culture

RESEARCH

HDFS graduate students have the opportunity to be involved in a wide range of studies led by faculty members and to develop their own programs of research during the course of their studies. Several research themes highlight some of the opportunities for students:

- Adolescence and emerging adulthood
- Biological bases of behavior
- Biological and health consequences of daily stress
- Cognitive and intellectual development
- Cultural diversity
- Developmental systems
- Families, work, and career development
- Family policy
- Gender and development
- Health, development, and family processes
- Innovative statistical and methodological approaches
- International studies
- Neuroscience perspectives on childhood and adolescence
- Parenting and caregiving
- Promoting healthy aging

Many students also work with faculty members on research projects being conducted within some of the multidisciplinary research centers within the College of Health and Human Development, including:

- The Center for Childhood Obesity Research (www.hhdev.psu.edu/ccor)
- The Center for Healthy Aging (healthyaging.psu.edu)
- The Methodology Center (methodology.psu.edu)
- The Prevention Research Center for the Promotion of Human Development (www.prevention.psu.edu)
